William Williams

Mr. Williams has served as American Tire’s Executive Vice President, Chief Financial Officer since March 2017, having previously joined the company in September 2016 as interim CFO from Tatum, a financial executive services and consulting firm where he was a CFO partner.

At American Tire he is responsible for finance, accounting, treasury, tax, investor relations, and shared services organizations, along with serving as executive sponsor of advanced Analytics (Torqata Data and Analytics, LLC), Productivity, and ESG programs and capabilities.

Prior to joining American Tire, Williams served in executive financial and advisory roles at several leading public and closely held companies across a variety of industries, including chemicals, office furniture, automotive, consumer packaged goods, and technology sectors.

He served as the CFO of large distribution companies in pharmaceuticals and food (including CFO of Martin Brower, the foodservice distributor for McDonald’s restaurants in the Americas), CFO of Honeywell International’s engineered materials unit, CFO of office furniture maker Steelcase, executive financial, strategy, and operational leadership roles at Kraft Foods and industrial conglomerate Esmark, as well as serving as an industry analytics leader at IBM, and shareholder value practice leader at corporate finance consultancy Stern Stewart.

He began his career in public accounting as a CPA with Deloitte. Williams earned his MBA from the University of Chicago Booth Graduate School of Business, his JD from DePaul University, and his undergraduate degree in accounting from Northern Illinois University.
